Modern Lullaby.

Sleep now, my little one,
Sleep now, my pretty one,
Mother your cradle rocks;
Mother will watch your bed,
Smoothing your curly head,
Father is watering stocks.

Hush now, my pretty one,
Close your eyes, little one,
Father will soon come to you;
While you are dreaming,
Your father is scheming,
To buy out a railroad or two.

Bye, bye, my baby dear,
Father's not far from here,
Getting us money to spend;
Father is hunting,
For Bye Baby Bunting,
Is hunting, a new dividend.

A CHAMPAGNE RIOT.

Harvard Students Celebrate the Opening of Spring.

Boston, March 23.—Harvard students rioted in Harvard square, Cambridge, yesterday, hurled bottled champagne at a policeman, drove away the driver of a milk wagon, of which they took possession, and removed awnings, barbers' and tailors' shop signs.

One arrest was made. A hat dropped by another and now in the possession of the police, bears the initials "S. K."

The youths first had a duel of champagne bottles, during which many dollars' worth of the liquid was spilled in the street. Then they sighted the driver of a milk wagon. He was compelled to flee under plea of bodily harm. Driven by one student and escorted by many more, the wagon was being driven merrily along when patrolman M. J. Kelley hove into sight, spurred on by the luckless driver.

Finding himself helpless, the student who drove the wagon sought to escape. Kelley was gaining on him when a quart of the juice of the grape was tossed at him. Kelley dodged and didn't get even a smell of the beverage. He did get the student.

The college authorities commenced an examination of the occupants of Dunster, Claverly, Apley and Westmoreland courts yesterday afternoon in an effort to trace the identity of some of the rioters. The student under arrest refuses to furnish the police with the information they seek.

Just Missed Being Damned.

Senator Bacon recently told his colleagues the following story about an old Georgia negro who was notorious for his chicken-stealing, but who, after having been persuaded to attend a religious revival, had expressed his desire to live a better life, and was called up to be questioned.

"Well, Rastus," said the revivalist, "I hope you are now prepared to live a Christian life in accordance with the rules of the church. Have you been stealing any chickens lately?"

"No, sah! I ain't stole no chicken oh late."

"Have you stolen any turkeys or pigs, then?" asked the revivalist.

"Rastus looked grieved when he replied: 'No, sah!'"

"I am very glad to hear that you have been doing better lately," replied the evangelist, "and I hope you will continue now to lead a holy and Christian life, Rastus."

After the revival meeting was over, Rastus hurried out of the tent with his wife, who had heard the catechizing her husband had received. When they were finally out of everybody's hearing,

"Rastus drew a long breath of relief, and turning to his wife exclaimed:

"Mandy, if he'd er said ducks I'd been a lost nigger sah!"—Harpers Weekly.

"Surprise Tests" on Railroads.

It is but a few years since American railroads began systematically the use of "surprise tests." These more or less directly grew out of an incident that occurred on one of the largest systems of the middle West. To test the operations of their signals some officials went out one night and leaving a signal set at "clear," simply removed the light. They watched ten or twelve trains go by and not one engineer stopped to inquire what was the trouble, as the rules demanded. This same road reports that in 1906, 1,500 surprise tests were made without one resulting in failure. The figures are a little staggering; human nature is not usually so inerrant. But what is certain is that accidents on this line have been very materially reduced. The Pennsylvania has had an almost identical experience; and very recently the officials of the Lake Shore saw twenty-four out of twenty-five trains go by a signal purposely set with "lights out." Yet when the New York Central system began these surprise tests, they were threatened with a strike—Carl Snyder in "The Railway Death Roll," in the April Everybody's.

His Plea in Excuse.

Thomas Jones, a citizen of dusky hue, was in the dock at the police court a day or two ago to answer a charge of stealing an overcoat. It wasn't no use to Thomas to try to slip off the coat and blame for the whole occurrence, because he was wearing the piffling garment when arrested.

"Why did you take it?" queried the Judge, as the prisoner was arraigned and, perforce, pleaded guilty.

"I can't tell 'o' sure yer Honor, exceptin' I've got temporary insanity and the unwritten law,"—Washington Star.

Northern League Echoes.

Billy Dyer, the former Rutland and Eastern league shortstop, has patched on his differences with the Atlanta club of the Southern league, to which he was sold by Cincinnati, and has left to join the team.

Harry Pattee, the peerless little second baseman who made such a brilliant record at Brown during his college career and later with the Jersey City team of the Eastern league, and Burlington of the Northern league, has signed a contract with the Harrisburg club of the Tri-State league. While the figures are not given out, it is safe betting that Pattee's contract called for at least $375 a month.

The fence about the Intercity grounds is partially collapsed, just as the Northern league has entirely collapsed.

Two of Burlington's players last year, Harry Hatch, pitcher, and "Bill" Higgins, catcher, are getting in to shape in the university of Vermont baseball cage at Burlington. Hatch goes to the Pueblo, Colo., team, which is managed by Seles, formerly manager of the Boston Nationals. Higgins is doubtful as to where he will play. It may be with Providence, where he finished last season, or with Trenton of the Tri-State league. Higgins is inclined to take the bit in his teeth and go where he wants to, regardless of his ownership.

Those other Vermont towns which were invited to join the Northern league, did not care to get into the spendthrift class. Don't blame 'em, either.

The Capturing of Lions.

As youngsters, most of us read Paul DuChailut's adventure books, and found huge delight in the fascinating descriptions of African wild animals and their capture. Such clean adventure fiction is not often found of late amid the preponderance of morbidly realistic stories, but we occasionally find a tale that pleases us as they used to. In the April McClure's there is such a one—"Sister Ann's Lions," by Floy Sulzer Bingham, a story of two wee girls who capture a pair of life sized lions. It is a rare combination indeed, and as improbable as it all may sound from this review there is in it an irresistible conviction. There are no heart-sneaking details in the story, no overworking of horror situations, in fact there is no gruesome touch in the whole story, but nevertheless it thrills one with excitement.

Prisco Offers $35,000 Purse.

San Francisco, March 23.—Eddie Graney in a telegram to the Hearst News Service from Byron Hot Springs, says he will give $35,000 for a Gans-Nelson contest on the 4th of July in San Francisco. He offers to post $10,000 forfeit today and put up the balance as soon as articles are signed.

This offer is $5,000 higher than the one made the fighters by Tex Rickard for a contest in Nevada on that date.
